Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission Releases Additional Material and Concludes Work

(Washington, DC) – The Financial Crisis Inquiry Commission announced today the release of significant new material on its website (www.fcic.gov). As the Commission prepares to close its doors on February 13, 2011, it is making available to the public an unprecedented amount of information including nearly 2,000 documents and more than 300 witness interviews in audio, transcript or summary form (213 of these have been posted as of today with the balance to be placed on the website by February 13). Also included in the newly released content are data compiled by the Commission staff used to inform the Commission’s inquiry and an interactive timeline of the crisis. These new materials along with the Commission’s report create a written and oral history of this financial and economic crisis available for public review for years to come.

Since the release of the Commission’s final report on January 27, 2011, the Commission’s website – which offers a free downloadable version of the report and accompanying dissents as well as print and eBook versions offered by PublicAffairs and the Government Printing Office – has had more than 350,000 unique visitors and more than 750,000 page visits. The Commission’s report, delivered to the President, Congress and the American people contains the data and evidence collected in the Commission’s inquiry, the conclusions of the Commission based on that inquiry, and accompanying dissents. The report and accompanying dissents will continue to be available to the public on the Commission’s website at FCIC.gov and as a paperback and an e-book published by the Government Printing Office and PublicAffairs wherever books are sold. The published report has been listed among The Washington Post and The New York Times best seller lists.

When the Commission closes pursuant to the Fraud Enforcement and Recovery Act (Public Law 111-21) the Commission’s records will be transferred to the National Archives and Records Administration. Although Congressional records can be sealed from 20 to 50 years, the Commission determined that it was in the public's interest to open its records to public inspection after only 5 years.

After February 13, 2011, the Commission’s website FCIC.gov will be hosted and maintained by the Rock Center for Corporate Governance at Stanford University. The National Archives and Records Administration will also host an archive copy of the Commission’s site in its current form.

Work of the Commission

In the course of its research and investigation, the Commission reviewed millions of pages of documents, interviewed more than 700 witnesses, and held 19 days of public hearings in New York, Washington, D.C., and communities across the country that were hard hit by the crisis. The Commission also drew from a large body of existing work about the crisis developed by congressional committees, government agencies, academics, journalists, legal investigators, and many others.

The Commission conducted research into broad and sometimes arcane subjects, such as mortgage lending and securitization, derivatives, corporate governance, and risk management. To bring these subjects out of the realm of the abstract, it conducted case study investigations of specific financial firms—and in many cases specific facets of these institutions—that played pivotal roles. Those institutions included American International Group (AIG), Bear Stearns, Citigroup, Countrywide Financial, Fannie Mae, Goldman Sachs, Lehman Brothers, Merrill Lynch, Moody's, and Wachovia. The Commission also looked more generally at the roles and actions of scores of other companies.

The Commission studied relevant policies put in place by successive Congresses and administrations. It also examined the roles of policy makers and regulators, including at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (and its successor, the Federal Housing Finance Agency), the Office of Thrift Supervision, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Treasury Department.

The Commission's statutory instructions set out 22 specific topics for inquiry and called for the examination of the collapse of major financial institutions that failed or would have failed if not for exceptional assistance from the government. The delivery of the Commission's report on January 27, 2011 fulfilled its mandate.
